Jerry Cegelske

Jerry is a retired US Fish and Wildlife Service Law Enforcement Special Agent whose career spanned 28 years, ten states, and four countries. He began working as an agent months after receiving his B.S. in Wildlife Management from the University of Minnesota in 1974. As a special agent, Jerry investigated illegal harvest of marine mammals, marine fisheries, raptors and grizzly bears. He ran the wildlife evidence morgue after the Exxon Valdez oil spill. As part of Aid to International Development (AID) programs, he worked with wildlife managers in Russia to develop approaches for combating tiger poaching, assessed the feasibility of establishing a national park in Russia, and in Ecuador, developed training programs for rangers responsible for protecting marine resources of the Galapagos Islands. His work included covert operations, complex investigations, developing inter-cultural education programs and training rangers in several parts of the world. Since retiring from his first career, Jerry has served as Code Enforcement Officer for Ketchikan, Alaska and led numerous community service projects related to coastal conservation and education.

Kolshorn Lecturer

Dr. Steven J. Cooke

Carleton University (Ottawa, Ontario)

Dr. Cooke is a biologist specializing in ecology and conservation physiology of fish. He is best known for researching physiological responses in fish in regard to natural and human impacts. He currently is an associate professor and Canada Research Chair in Environmental Science and Biology at Carleton University and the Editor-in-Chief of the scientific Journal Conservation Physiology. In 2009 he published and co-edited a book on the biology and management of centrarchid fishes titled Centrarchid Fishes: Diversity, Biology and Conservation. He was the president of the Canadian Aquatic Resources Section of the American Fisheries Society, from 2011-2013 and is the Chair of the Sea Lamprey Research Board of the Great Lakes Fishery Commission. Cooke has received the Award of Excellence from the Fisheries Management Section of the American Fisheries Society, the Young Investigator Medal from the Fisheries Society of the British Isles., and the Distinguished Service Award from AFS.

About the Kolshorn Lecture Series

Each year, the FWCB invites a distinguished scientist or conservationist to campus to give the Kolshorn Lecture. The Kolshorn lecture series was established in 1982 to honor Otto W. Kolshorn, a teacher and farmer in Goodhue County.
